EDITOR'S NOTE

The gracious assistance and invaluable insight offered by our guest editors, Professors Mark A. Graber and Sanford Levinson, warrants our most appreciative thanks. The Tulsa Law Review also sincerely thanks the book reviewers for contributing their time, writings, and perspectives to this issue. I personally want to thank my colleague, Brian Kester, for his assistance in editing and publishing this issue. We hope that this book review is the first of many answering Professor Levinson's charge to revive medium-length reviews as indispensable staples among law review publications.
